Dear Interested Parties and Community Partners,

The Department of Revenue launched the fourth year of the Working Families Tax Credit on Feb. 1, 2026. This annual state tax credit is available to low-to-moderate income individuals and families in Washington. In the third year of the WFTC, more than $228 million was refunded to nearly 316,000 recipients. This program is making a huge difference in our aligned mission to dismantle poverty in Washington.

Participants can receive up to $1,330 this year if they are generally eligible for the federal Earned Income Tax Credit and are a resident of Washington. See the eligibility criteria. In addition, unlike the federal EITC, participants who file taxes with an Individual Taxpayer Identification Number are eligible for the WFTC.

Eligible participants can apply using tax preparers and software, online through the MyDOR filing portal (available in English and Spanish), or by paper (available in English and 12 other languages).

It is estimated that up to 450,000 individuals or families are potentially eligible for the WFTC. This means there is plenty of opportunity for us to work together to drive awareness so that all who are eligible can access this critical program and receive the funds they are entitled to.

The DOR has a wealth of resources available on the WFTC website at workingfamiliescredit.wa.gov. I encourage you to check out these resources and see how you can come alongside DOR and help promote the WFTC program.

- An events calendar with current outreach and application assistance events.
- A partner toolkit with promotional materials available in several languages. Partners can place a free order to have materials printed and mailed.
- Educational videos with helpful information about eligibility and the application process.
- Contact information for the WFTC outreach team to connect with outreach specialists in your area who can offer any support.

Also, you can request a DOR speaker to meet with your organization or team to share more about the WFTC program or brainstorm outreach partnerships and strategies.

We share a common goal to meet our most vulnerable Washington residents where they are and give them the access and resources they need to achieve financial stability.

Thank you for your continued support of the WFTC program.

Sincerely,

Brice Montgomery, Director
Community Services Division
